

United States Court of Appeals
For the Eighth Circuit

No. 15-1212

United States of America

Plaintiff - Appellee

v.

Louis Sayles

Defendant - Appellant

Appeal from United States District Court for the Western District of Missouri - Kansas City

Submitted: June 16, 2015

Filed: June 18, 2015

[Unpublished]

Before WOLLMAN, LOKEN, and BENTON, Circuit Judges.

PER CURIAM.

At a supervised-release revocation hearing, Louis Sayles admitted to the district court¹ that he had committed several Grade C violations of his release conditions while serving a second period of supervised release. The court revoked supervised release, and after hearing argument from both sides as to an appropriate revocation sentence and giving Sayles the opportunity for allocution, the court sentenced him to 15 months in prison with no additional supervised release. On appeal, Sayles contends that the sentence is substantively unreasonable because the district court did not adequately consider the 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a) sentencing factors. After careful review of the district court's remarks at the revocation hearing, we reject Sayles's argument, and conclude that the court did not abuse its discretion. See United States v. Miller, 557 F.3d 910, 915-16 (8th Cir. 2009) (standard of review). The judgment is affirmed, and we grant counsel leave to withdraw.
